Foreword

This augurs well with the mandate of the Institute to have a comprehensive database system in order to maintain important information about voluntary organisations. The Institute, for a long time, was in a need of having such a database so as to keep itself well informed with the changing capacity building needs of voluntary organisations in view of ever shifting trends in voluntary sector. Information from a large number of voluntary organisations was sought with the help of a structured proforma which was given a final shape after a thorough pre-testing as well as incorporating suggestions of members of Project Advisory Committee. The proforma included information on legal status and other contact information, major activities, areas of interest, target groups, community support, areas in which training is required, annual budget, infrastructural and other facilities available with the organisations and so on.

The present document, which is being brought out as volume I, is a compilation of information received from 330 voluntary organisations during the year 2005-06. This volume has been divided into two parts: part A contains major findings emerging from information compiled for 330 voluntary organisations together, while part B reflects profile of individual voluntary organisations.

I hope, this document would not only help the Institute to venture into new areas of capacity building training but would also help the voluntary organisations who have shared their information with us in the process of widely disseminating information about their work.

I thank Dr. Ashok Kumar, Joint Director of the Institute for the overall guidance and supervision to ensure progress of the project. I appreciate the efforts put in by Shri Subhasis Ray and Smt. Sunita Mathur, both Assistant Directors and Incharges of the Project to bring out the document. I would also like to place on record the services provided by Ms. Poonam Joshi, Project Assistant who worked with the project initially, Ms. Nemika Pandey, Project Assistant who is currently working in the project and Ms. Purnima Negi, Data Entry Operator for their sincere support and assistance to the Project Incharges in carrying out the tasks related to the first phase of the project.

Introduction

Since its inception, the Institute has been engaged in promoting voluntary action in the country through its training and research endeavours. This original mandate of the Institute has always prompted its interface with large number of voluntary organisations working in different parts of the country. However, this interface has always been restricted to participation of voluntary organisations in the training programmes and consultative meets organised by the Institute. Besides, the Institute made initiative to highlight the efforts of some selected voluntary organisations by undertaking research studies. Over a period of time it was realized that though the Institute had been working closely with voluntary sector, yet there was a need for evolving a mechanism to have continuous interaction with the voluntary organisations working in the field of women and child development. This process of interaction does not merely mean facilitation of participation of voluntary organisations in the programmes and activities of the Institute, rather it means a broader interface by maintaining updated information about these organisations so that the Institute is in a better position to address their capacity building needs and requirements through its training and research activities. In view of this, it was felt that maintaining a database on voluntary organisations, a long standing requirement of the Institute, was one such mechanism, which would, inter-alia, help the Institute to keep itself informed about the latest developments in voluntary sector.

The present pattern of database maintained in the Institute as also its Documentation Centre on Women and Children does not adequately cover all the information required to have a complete profile of a voluntary organisation - this pattern is restricted to only on seeking certain basic information from voluntary organisations. Therefore, this pattern is not adequate in assessing capacity building needs of voluntary organisations. In view of this, the present project on database on voluntary organisations was evolved as a regular academic activity of the Institute on a broad based mechanism with an ultimate aim of interacting regularly with voluntary organisations so as to provide quality inputs in building their capacity; providing information to like minded voluntary organisations; identifying capacity building needs and requirements of voluntary organisations; and grouping voluntary organisations based on various themes being dealt by the Institute.

A detailed proforma for seeking information from voluntary organisations was developed and suggestions of the members of Project Advisory Committee (PAC) were sought on the proforma. On obtaining suggestions of the PAC members, the proforma was pre-tested with selected voluntary organisations before finalization. The Information Sheet so finalized was evolved as a user-friendly structured proforma for enabling the voluntary organisations to record their responses.

The structured Information Sheet was subsequently sent to about 2500 voluntary organisations working in different States/Union Territories of the country. This process of sending Information Sheet began in the month of October 2005. In response to this, 330 filled-in Information Sheets were received by the Institute till March 2006. The information received through these proformae were subsequently processed and an attempt has been made to present the salient findings emerged out of these proformae in this document.

The document has been divided into two parts. Part A contains the compiled information on the 330 voluntary organisations which had responded on various facets of their functioning. Part B presents profile of individual voluntary organisations, thus providing information on each voluntary organisation which had responded.

It is important to mention here that the information provided by voluntary organisations have been authenticated and certified by each voluntary organisation which sent back the Information Sheet duly filled in. Thus, the onus of information shared by these voluntary organisations lies exclusively with them - the Institute has only facilitated in bringing out a compiled document based on the information provided by these organisations. Further, these voluntary organisations would be required to update the information sent by them after every three years.

Part A
Compiled Information on Voluntary Organisations

As mentioned earlier, the Institute received duly filled-in proforma from 330 voluntary organisations till March 2006. The areas of information sought from these organisations included, besides basic information (viz., address, legal status, activities etc.), areas of interest, broad thematic areas in which they are functioning, capacity building initiatives, training needs, annual budget, nature of community support, availability of infrastructure facilities, types of publications brought out and areas of professional expertise. It was found that some of the voluntary organisations did not record their responses in some places.

The following paragraphs give brief descriptions on the afore-mentioned areas of information provided by 330 voluntary organisations:

Table 1 shows that out of 330 voluntary organisations, maximum number of organisations were from Tamil Nadu (19.39%), followed significantly by Andhra Pradesh (14.85%), Uttar Pradesh (9.39%), West Bengal (8.79%), Orissa (6.36%), Delhi (5.15%) and Rajasthan (4.85%). The responses from remaining States/Union Territories were quite meager. It may be seen from the above table that out of 35 States/Union Territories, voluntary organisations from 10 States/Union Territories did not send back the Information Sheet duly filled in till March 2006.

Year of Establishment

Information was sought from the voluntary organisations to indicate the year of their establishment as this information clearly helps in assessing the standing of a voluntary organisation. It was found that as many as 16 voluntary organisations (4.85%), out of 330, did not indicate their year of establishment.

Table 2 shows that almost 50 per cent of the organisations were established during 1986-95 - this was the period when a massive growth of voluntary sector took place in the country. During the period, welfaristic approach adopted by the conventional voluntary organisations got shifted to developmental and then ultimately to empowerment oriented one. The table also shows that among the voluntary organisations which responded to Institute's Information Sheet, two-third of them were established during 1986 and later. Responses from voluntary organisations established before 1965 were poor as only 4 per cent voluntary organisations responded were found to have been established during this period.

So far as status of year of establishment in various States/Union Territories is concerned, data shows that in Tamil Nadu, maximum voluntary organisations were established during the period of 1986-95 (56.67%), followed by 25 per cent in 1996-2005 and 15 per cent in 1976-85. The situation is almost similar in Andhra Pradesh where majority of voluntary organisations were established during the year 1986-95 i.e. 58 per cent, followed by 29 per cent in the year 1996-2005 and 11 per cent during the year 1976-85. It was found that besides Tamil Nadu and Andhra Pradesh, in 14 other States/Union Territories, 50 per cent or more voluntary organisations were established during 1986-95.

Registration Status

Getting the organisation registered under an appropriate Act, though optional, yet it helps an organisation to enjoy a legal status which has many ramifications for its smooth functioning. The options available for getting the organisation registered are manifold. Acts under which a voluntary organisation can get itself registered include Societies Registration Act, 1860, State Societies Registration Act, Indian Trust Act, 1882, Bombay Public Trust Act, 1950, Charitable and Religious Trust Act, 1920, Companies Act, 1956, Cooperative Societies Act, 1912, Multistate Cooperative Societies Act -

1942, 1984 and 2002. Table-2 shows that out of 330 voluntary organisations from all over India 312 voluntary organisations (94.55%) reported that the organisations were registered under one Act or another. As many as 18 voluntary organisations (5.45%) did not indicate their registration status.

Effort has been made to trace the trends followed by voluntary organisations in opting for a particular Act from the available lot. Table 4 shows that while registering the organisations options were utilized under seven types of Acts as indicated in the Table.

(Multiple Response)

Responses	No.	%
Societies Registration Act, XXI 1860	192	61.54

Bombay Public Trust Act 1950	17	5.45
Charitable and Religious Trust Act, 1920	2	0.64
Cooperative Societies Act, 1912	1	0.32
Multistate Cooperative Societies Act	2	0.64

It was found that 62 per cent voluntary organisations were registered under the Societies Registration Act XXI 1860. Data shows that in Andhra Pradesh 36 voluntary organisations (73.47%) who responded were registered under Societies Registration Act, 1860, closely followed by Uttar Pradesh with 90 per cent voluntary organisations, 100 per cent voluntary organisations in Orissa, 59 per cent in West Bengal and 80 per cent voluntary organisations in Maharashtra were reportedly registered under this Act. All the voluntary organisations from the Union Territories were reported to have been registered under this Act.

There are States which have enacted their own Registration Acts for voluntary organisations. The above Table shows that as many as 86 voluntary organisations (27.56%) were registered under such Acts. Data reveals that in Tamil Nadu, 41 per cent voluntary organisations were registered under the State Societies Registration Act. These State Acts are almost similar to the Societies Registration Act 1860 except that these are drafted to suit the needs and requirements of voluntary organisations in a particular State. The next highest percentage of voluntary organisations registered under these Acts is Rajasthan with 13 voluntary organisations (81.25%), Andhra Pradesh with 11 voluntary organisations (22.45%), West Bengal 14 voluntary organisations (48.28%) and Jammu and Kashmir with 8 voluntary organisations (80.00%). It was evident from the data that most of the registrations were made under these Acts in the year 1986-95 (13.94%), followed by 1976-85 (6.06%), 1996-2005 (4.85%) and 1966-75 (0.30%).

One of the options available with the voluntary organisations for getting themselves registered under an Act is Indian Trust Act, 1882. Out of total number of voluntary organisations which reported registration status, 9 per cent voluntary organisations were reportedly registered under this Act. In this category, Jharkhand led the group with 50 per cent, followed by Tamil Nadu (31.00%), Bihar (20.00%) and Karnataka (28.57%). Maximum number of voluntary organisations (48.28%) were registered under this Act in the year 1996-2005, closely followed by 1986-95 (44.83%). From amongst the recently created States voluntary organisations based only in Jharkhand (50.00%) were registered under Indian Trust Act.

So far as the status of registration under the Charitable and Religious Trust Act, 1920 is concerned, it is found that only 2 voluntary organisations (0.6%) were registered under the Act. These two organisations represented the States of Kerala and Tamil Nadu, registered in year 1976-85 and 1966-75 respectively.

Another popular Act under which voluntary organisations were reported to have been registered is Bombay Public Trust Act 1950. It was found that 90 per cent voluntary organisations from Maharashtra and 88 per cent voluntary organisations from Gujarat were registered under this Act. Overall, 51 per cent voluntary organisations were registered under this Act. It is interesting to note that a voluntary organisation from the State of Uttar Pradesh was also registered under this Act.

It was also found that the number of voluntary organisations registered under Cooperative Societies Act 1912 and Multistate Cooperative Society Act was very meagre - one organisation in Delhi under the former and two organisations in West Bengal under the latter were found to have been registered.

An attempt was made to find out the status of registration under the Income Tax Act 1961 and it was found that though most of the voluntary organisations (65.15%) obtained registration under this Act, yet not so was in case of all. This is so despite the fact that under Income Tax Act 1961 registration should be done within one year of establishment. However, this requirement is often waived off by the concerned authority at the request of the concerned voluntary organisations after receiving genuine and sufficient reasons. In response to a question as to what was the gap between years of registration under registration Acts and Income Tax Act, 180 voluntary organisations responded. It was found that only 14 per cent voluntary organisations got themselves registered under Income Tax Act within a year of registration. Forty-two per cent voluntary organisations reported that there was such a gap of more than 10 years. It was reported by 194 voluntary organisations (58.79%) that they sought exemption under the Income Tax Act 1961.

So far as registration under Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act 1976 (FCRA) is concerned, as many as 227 voluntary organisations (68.79%) reported that they obtained FCRA certificate after registration. This shows that majority of the organisations, which responded to Institute's Information Sheet, cleared the legal hurdle of getting access to foreign funds.

Major Activities of the Organisations

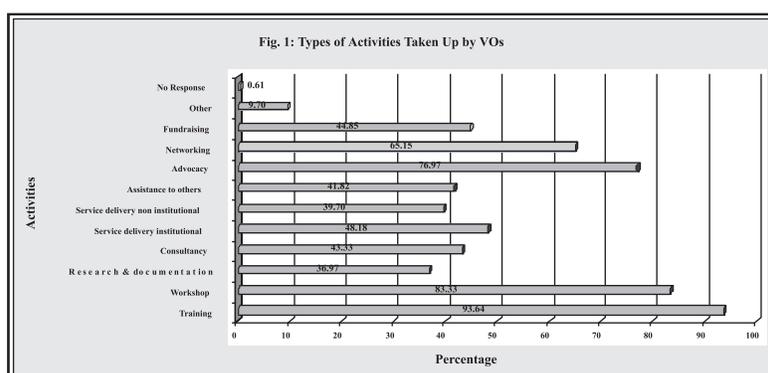

The voluntary organisations were asked to indicate the major activities actually being carried out by them. In response, almost all the organisations gave information by indicating broad activities they are conducting for their target groups. Over half of the organisations (50.32%) reported that they were carrying out health related activities such as community health services, health education, health check-up, health camps, RCH, HIV/AIDS. As many as 146 voluntary organisations (46.50%) mentioned that they were engaged in carrying out vocational training, skill development and employment generation programme. Forty-two per cent organisations were involved in implementing educational programmes like non-formal education, formal education, adult education, computer education. It was gathered from 114 voluntary organisations (36.31%) that they were carrying out activities related to women's rights, women empowerment, mother and child care and various women related issues. This was followed by the response 'SHG formation/income generating activities' (35.67%) and 'child development and welfare/child rights/various child related issues' (34.39%). The other important responses in this regard included micro-credit, micro-finance, economic development, watershed development, land and forest based activity, sericulture, agriculture development, rural development, rural health, working women's hostel, girls hostel, short stay homes, day care centres, awareness generation programme, environmental awareness, vermin composite, old age home, welfare programme for aged and marginalised, counselling centre, family counselling, rehabilitation for working children and disabled persons etc.

The activities carried out by the voluntary organisations were classified into certain assorted types which have been presented at Table 5 (Fig. 1). The Table shows that the maximum number of voluntary organisations (93.64%) was engaged in providing training. This is followed by conducting workshops (83.33%). It is found from the Table that the voluntary organisations were also engaged in advocacy work (76.97%) and developing networking (65.15%) apart from fund raising (44.85%) and providing assistance to others (41.82%). Quite a significant percentage of voluntary organisations were found to have been engaged in service delivery - out them 48 per cent were reportedly engaged in institutional care and 40 per cent were engaged in providing non-institutional services. Apart from the above, responses received against 'others' included survey, women/girl development programmes etc.

State-wise data reveals that research and documentation has been an area wherein adequate emphasis has not been given by the voluntary organisations. In most of the States and Union Territories, less than 40 per cent voluntary organisations were found to be concentrating on this area. This revelation is significant because research and documentation is an area where voluntary organisations can really contribute enormously as they have rich experiences in working at the grass-roots level. This component can be converged with the efforts of those who are engaged in capacity building of voluntary organisations.

Target Groups

It was gathered that 77 per cent responding voluntary organisations were working with women as their target groups. More than 60 per cent voluntary organisations reported that their target group was children. It was reported by 14 per cent voluntary organisations that their target group was girls/adolescents. Seven per cent voluntary organisations were reportedly working with child labour/street children/orphan children. So far as various other target groups are concerned, responses included disabled/handicapped, aged, dalits, tribals, backward and minority communities, people below poverty line, drug addicts, HIV/AIDS patients, farmers, weavers, labourers, truckers, commercial sex workers/prostitutes, unemployed population and migrants.

Areas/Subjects of Interest

In addition to the kind of activities the voluntary organisations were actually carrying out, it was also explored from these organisations about the areas or subjects of interest in which they would like to work. These areas or subjects have been categorized into four: child related, adolescent related, women related and other important areas/subjects.

So far as child related areas are concerned, 72 per cent voluntary organisations reported that child health and nutrition was their area of interest, while a large number of voluntary organisations mentioned different areas of child education to be their subjects of interest - early childhood development (63.64%), pre-school education (66.06%), formal education (48.79%), education for out of school children (68.88%) and non-formal education (63.33%). Amongst other responses, significant areas included childhood rights (61.21%), children in need or care and protection (49.09%), counselling and mental health (45.15%), child guidance services (42.12%), child trafficking - prevention (36.06%), rescue (20.61%) and rehabilitation (25.45%), drug abuse (36.97%) and so on.

Voluntary organisations also spelt out certain adolescent related areas of interest which they would like to work in. As many as 259 voluntary organisations (78.48%) expressed that vocational training/skill development was one of the most important areas of interest for them. This response was closely followed by income generation (77.88%). The other major responses in this regard included adolescent health (65.15%), reproductive health (61.52%), prevention of HIV/AIDS among adolescents (60.61%), and adolescent development (58.18%).

Regarding women related areas of interest, 90 per cent voluntary organisations mentioned that their area of interest was women's empowerment; this was closely followed by women's self-groups (89.09%). Among the other responses, significant ones included rights and status of women (79.09%), women's education (77.58%), women's health (73.03%), micro credit and micro enterprise (71.52%), capacity building of women in Panchayati Raj/Civic Bodies (68.79%), violence against women (63.33%), prevention of HIV/AIDS among women (62.12%), support services for women at work (61.82%) and women nutrition (60.61%).

In addition to child related, adolescent related and women related areas of interests, some of the voluntary organisations indicated about their areas of interest in some other important subjects as well. Most of them (83.94%) mentioned rural development as one of their important areas of interest. Sixty-five per cent spelt out community mobilisation and community resource management as their areas of interest. The other significant responses in this regard included family counselling centre (56.36%), relief work (53.03%) and parenting, parental care and planned parenthood (36.67%).

All these areas of interests as indicated by the voluntary organisations are significantly important for training and research institutes like NIPCCD as these are indicative of potential work areas for the voluntary organisations, which could be explored while identifying thematic areas for training and research activities.

Capacity Building Initiatives for Staff

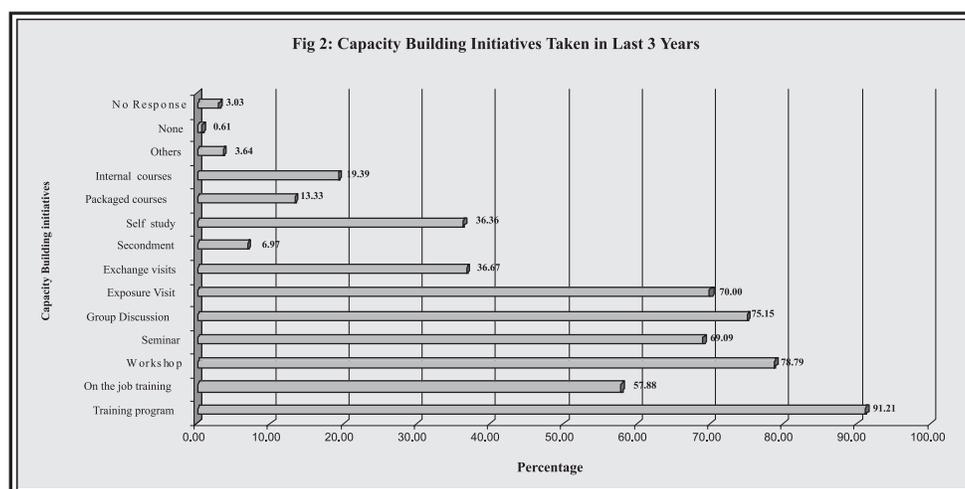

The voluntary organisations were also asked to mention about the steps initiated by them as capacity building initiatives for their staff in the last three years. This was asked to assess the concerns of these organisations for the staff development. A variety of responses have been received from the voluntary organisations on this aspect.

Table 6 (Fig.2) shows that the maximum number of voluntary organisations (91.21%) considered training to be the most used initiative for the capacity building of their staff. This means that either these organisations trained their staff on their own or deputed them for training to a training institution. As many as 260 voluntary organisations (78.79%) utilized 'workshop' as a method of capacity building initiative. The other significant responses included group discussion (75.15%), exposure visit (70.00%), seminar (69.09%), on the job training (57.88%). Some other responses also included exchange visits (36.67%), self study [correspondence courses etc.] (36.36%), internal courses (19.39%) and packaged courses (13.33%).

Training Needs

Linked with the capacity building initiatives of voluntary organisations, another question on their training needs was asked to find out their own assessment on the training needs and requirements.

Table 7 lists out a variety of areas of training needs as reported by the voluntary organisations. Out of 330 voluntary organisations, 256 (77.58%) responded to this question. Some of the significant responses included organisation management/ organisational development/capacity building programme (20.30%), health/reproductive health/nutrition/geriatric care/child care/HIV/AIDS/RCH (18.48%), human and child rights (16.67%), project management/formulation/monitoring and evaluation (15.45%). Some of the other training needs as identified by these organisations also included resource management/natural resource management, micro planning/micro finance/SHG training/accounting, fund raising techniques, documentation, community resource mobilisation, trafficking and counselling, adolescent related issues/family life education, good governance, financial management and report writing and research and survey/networking.

Budget

It is an established fact that in order to run the activities smoothly every organisation needs to make a prior planning regarding its income and expenditure in the form of budget. Undoubtedly, the budget of an organisation helps carrying out its activities on time. The budget of any organisation depends much upon the types of activities it runs and reflects the volume of work it is carrying out.

Table 8 shows that about 2 per cent of voluntary organisations were having an annual budget below Rs. 1 lakh, whereas, 59 organisations (17.88 %) had the budget between Rs. 1 lakh and 5 lakhs (in the State of Andhra Pradesh 19 voluntary organisations (38.78%), 13 voluntary organisations (20.31%) in Tamil Nadu, 6 voluntary organisations (19.35%) in Uttar Pradesh).

On the other hand, only 7 voluntary organisations (2.12%) had the annual budget of Rs. 5 crores and above (2 voluntary organisations each in Delhi and West Bengal and 1 organisation each in Gujarat, Maharashtra and Tamil Nadu). Nineteen voluntary organisations (5.76%) reported that they were running activities with an annual budget between Rs. 1 crore and 5 crores.

Nature of Community Support

The responding voluntary organisations were asked to mention the kind of community support they received in terms of cash, kind and labour. Two hundred and eighty-seven voluntary organisations responded to this. The responses included donations, beneficiary contribution (cash), furniture, infrastructure, food grains (kind) and active participation in cleanliness drive, propaganda etc. (labour). As many as 215 voluntary organisations (74.91%) mentioned that they received community support mainly in the form of labour. This response was followed by cash (71.08%) and kind (65.51%) (Table 9).

Table 9

(Multiple Response)

Community Support	No.	%
Cash	204	71.08
Kind	188	65.51
Labour	215	74.91

Cash is another form in which community lends its support to the voluntary organisations. Cash can be generated through the beneficiary contribution, sponsorship, fees etc. apart from individual donations made by general public. Voluntary organisations have also mentioned that at times money is provided to them on credit basis by waiving off the interest. The voluntary organisations reported that people also come forward to provide help in the form of kind which includes furniture, infrastructure, construction material, toys, medicines, etc. to the voluntary organisations. Some voluntary organisations have also reported that the people extended help in the process of marketing the products of the organisations.

Fund Raising

The main source of funds available with a voluntary organisation generally includes grant-in-aid or financial assistance from donor agencies. Apart from this, as discussed in the earlier paragraphs, community contribution also plays a vital role in supporting the functioning of a voluntary organisation. Besides these two sources, voluntary organisations are also found to be adopting various techniques and methods to raise funds from various sources. The present project made an attempt to find out these techniques and methods being deployed by the voluntary organisations. The responses from voluntary organisations revealed several fund raising techniques being used by them to generate funds from various sources.

Table 10 shows various techniques of fund raising being deployed by the voluntary organisations. Thirty-eight per cent voluntary organisations reported that they have extensively used techniques such as mailers (including e-mails), appeals, sponsorship, donation boxes etc. to raise funds. Fund was also generated through fees for vocational training courses run by the voluntary organisations and membership fees, as reported by 24 per cent voluntary organisations. Sale of products and books, exhibitions and income generating activities also facilitated generation of funds by 22 voluntary organisations. Among other significant techniques used by the voluntary organisations, 15 per cent voluntary organisations reported that they generated funds through 'loan/rent/bank interest/hundi collection/corpus fund' while it was through 'consultancy/service charges' in case of 6 per cent voluntary organisations.

Data shows that voluntary organisations in many States raised their funds by deploying mailers/ appeals/sponsorship/donation techniques [(Andhra Pradesh (28.57%), Kerala (46.15%), Manipur

Availability of Building

Table 11 shows that majority of the voluntary organisations (56.36%) had their own building. As many as 153 voluntary organisations (46.36%) reported that they hired building for the purpose of the organisational work. Significantly, 7 per cent voluntary organisations were reportedly housed in donated building on lease.

It is interesting to note from the above Table that maximum number of voluntary organisations with whom buildings were available, be it owned, hired, donated or taken on lease were established during the period of 1986-1995. In this regard, the second in order was found among those voluntary organisations which were established during 1976-1985 and the third in order was among those established during 1996-2005.

Facilities Available with Organisations

There is no denying of the fact that physical assets and infrastructural facilities available with voluntary organisations are the determining factors for smooth functioning of the organisational activities. Voluntary organisations, during the course of their growth and expansion, make attempt to acquire physical assets and infrastructure of their own. The present project tried to explore about the kind of infrastructural facilities available with the voluntary organisations. It may be mentioned here that having classrooms is commonly found with the voluntary organisations as they require this facility for running children and adolescent related activities as well as conducting small sessions. However, having hostel or guest room facility indicates that the concerned voluntary organisations are running activities on a larger scale.

Table 12 draws out a comprehensive picture on the infrastructural facilities available with the voluntary organisations. Data shows that most of the organisations (71.52%) had classroom facility and out of these, 61 per cent organisations extended this facility to other organisations as well and 57 per cent of them on payment basis. As in the case of voluntary organisations (68.79%) which had Lecture Hall facility, 69 per cent of them provided this facility to other organisations and 63 per cent of them on payment basis. Similarly, out of 234 voluntary organisations, (70.91%), which had the conference hall facility, 166 of them (70.94%) extended this facility to other organisations and 110 of them (66.27%) on payment basis. Hostel facility was reportedly available with 77 voluntary organisations (23.33%) and guest room with 35 per cent voluntary organisations.

Products

As a part of income generating activities as well as fund raising campaign, voluntary organisations are found to be bringing out products of various kinds. Information was specifically sought on this aspect from the voluntary organisations. It was reported by 152 voluntary organisations (46.06%) that they had products of one type or the other.

Products, as reported by the voluntary organisations, reflect not only the cultural aspects of the area but also the availability of certain resources. Utilizing the opportunity regarding availability of raw materials and favourable geographical and market conditions voluntary organisations are found to have initiated manufacturing of different products. In many cases, this process also works as a source of livelihood for those associated with the process of production. Voluntary organisations are found to have gone one step ahead and now they are reportedly marketing these products to raise funds for further activities. It was found that 46 per cent voluntary organisations were engaged in manufacturing products like spices, whereas they are also engaged in preserving food items (8.26%), handicrafts (19.08%), handloom products (28.95%), agarbatti and candles (12.50%), vermicompost (21.79%), jute products (5.92%) and bamboo articles (5.26%). Apart from these, voluntary organisations engaged their beneficiaries to manufacture animal husbandry products (5.92%), embroidery work (7.89%), greeting card making (3.95%), carpet weaving (3.29%) and silk products (2.63%).

A close look at the overall scenario would reveal that handicraft and handloom products are manufactured in most of the States but vermicompost making is limited to Tamil Nadu (26.47%), Kerala (50.00%), Haryana (100.00%), Madhya Pradesh (100.00%), Rajasthan (12.50%) and Uttar Pradesh (15.38%). It is interesting to note that some of the voluntary organisations have directed their attention towards ayurvedic medicines and herbal plants; though only 12 per cent voluntary organisations reported that they were involved in growing medicinal plants.

Though negligible in percentage yet 3 per cent voluntary organisations were reportedly encouraging manufacturing of silk products like sarees, scarfs, cushion covers etc. The States initiating such work include Andhra Pradesh, Jharkhand and Tamil Nadu. Initiative of voluntary organisations in West Bengal found to be quite different as 29 per cent voluntary organisations of the State reported that they produced handloom products, demand for which was usually constant throughout the year. Other States following the same initiative were Andhra Pradesh, Assam, Himachal Pradesh, Karnataka, and Uttar Pradesh.

As the Table reveals voluntary organisations were engaged in producing almost everything of daily necessities ranging from animal husbandry products to handloom and silk articles, preserved food to organic manures, carpet weaving to embroidery and zari work. Besides these, other products included furniture, leather, wood and wool products along with some sanitary material and tool kits.

Despite the fact that selling of greeting cards plays an important role in fund raising process, yet only 2 per cent voluntary organisations were found to be engaged in producing them. Majority of the products were for local consumption but were capable of bringing monetary gains to the producers.

Production of several items is not sufficient unless these are marketed. In Tamil Nadu 53 per cent voluntary organisations were reportedly marketing the products as compared to 17 per cent voluntary organisations in Andhra Pradesh, whereas the scenario in West Bengal was 66 per cent, 42 per cent in Uttar Pradesh, 43 per cent in Orissa, 62 per cent in Kerala and 37 per cent in Rajasthan. These organisations reported that they took help from the volunteers who assisted in marketing of such products made by the SHG members collectively or individually.

Documentation/Publications

Documentation and publication undoubtedly acts as the strong face of an organisation and therefore an utterly important ingredient for making an organisation transparent, interactive and communicative. This not only helps an organisation to communicate about itself but also adds to enormous contributions it has made in visible form. Voluntary organisations in their initial stage of development usually bring out pamphlets and posters as publicity material and with the passage of time become capable of bringing out advocacy material, annual report, newsletter, journal etc. Voluntary organisations engaged in process based work, often prepare and publish guidebook, information booklets etc. Those voluntary organisations which are engaged in fund raising, are also found to be publishing souvenir. Voluntary organisations are also found to be taking out publications like newsletter and brochure as well as programme/project reports for their donor agencies. Publishing annual report has also become the means for bringing in transparency in the organisation, but, is often not given due importance by the organisations.

Table 13 reveals not-a-very-encouraging scenario so far as the component of documentation and publication vis-à-vis the responding voluntary organisations is concerned. As many as 112 voluntary organisations (33.94%) did not report about any documentation or publication being brought out by them. More than half of the voluntary organisations mentioned that they brought out publications in the form of leaflet. Advocacy material was being brought out by 20 per cent voluntary organisations, as reported. More than 17 per cent voluntary organisations reported that they brought out newsletter, while more than 9 per cent brought out magazine. Only 5 per cent voluntary organisations reported that they brought out Annual Report.

Professional Expertise Available

The voluntary organisations were asked to indicate the professional expertise available with them in order to have an idea about the nature of capable resource faculty that can be tapped. Almost one-third of the voluntary organisations did not mention anything in this regard. The areas of expertise as reported by the voluntary organisations included handicrafts/skill trainer, health and hygiene, disability, RCH/HIV/AIDS, micro finance/SHG, gender issues, education, natural resource management, environmental education, renewable energy, rural/tribal development, community organisation and mobilisation, micro planning, income generation, vocational training, child rights issues, networking and so on.

This piece of information is useful in case of making collaborative venture with the voluntary organisations having specialized knowledge and expertise in certain areas.
